

Nadine M. Bailey

Nadine's current practice includes land use, permitting, zoning, commercial real estate and development, business law, and estate planning. With decades of experience as a civil litigator, she is particularly adept at spotting a broad set of potential issues and at minimizing clients' long-term exposure. Additionally, her discernment and dexterity with public officials, technical experts, and the opposition are a great asset to the firm and her clients.

Her experience in civil litigation includes business, commercial, and construction litigation, as well as insurance defense, including premises liability, product liability, property damage, personal injury matters, bad faith claims, and personal injury protection benefits claims. Further, she has over a decade of experience in complex litigation, including insurance coverage disputes, reinsurance policies, and class action lawsuits.

Nadine has successfully litigated, mediated, and taken to trial numerous cases on behalf of national corporate clients, major transportation companies, insurers, and self-insureds. She had much success in disposing of cases through dispositive motion practice, leading to numerous victories on behalf of her clients including several winning motions for summary judgment that were held up on appeal.

Education

New England Law, Boston, MA
Juris Doctor, 1999

University of Bridgeport, Bridgeport, CT
B.S. International Business, 1991

Admitted to Practice

Courts of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts
U.S. District Court, District of Massachusetts
First Circuit Court of Appeals